Plays Rachmaninoff Concerto. Tschaikowsky Symphony Is Magnificently Performed

THE PROGRAM "The Bartered Bride". Smetana No. 3 for plane and erchestra. Bachmaninest Alfred Certet

Symphony No. 5 in El minor-Tachatkowsky

The great Tschaikowsky Symphony in E minor, No. 5, was the feature of yesterday afternoon's program of the Philadelphia Orchestra, despite the fact that Alfred Cortot, the French pianist, was the soloist of the day in a concerto by Rachmaninoff, which was new to Philadelphia.

The symphony, considered from all standpoints, is probably the finest that the great Russian composer ever wrote. for it is more consistent and less morbid than the Pathetique, which is unquestionably the most popular. Mr. Stokowski interprets Tschaikowsky with more intensity than any other composer, and yesterday he gave the finest reading of the great work that he has yet given. The orchestra seemed to feel the musical intent of the conductor even more keenly than usual, and played with an attention and a fidelity to his indicated wishes that made alto gether a performance virtually perfect. In a work so well done as a whole, it is hard to pick places of unusual excellence, but the tone of the orchestra, in quality and in control of the dynamics, was exquisite, both in the solo parts and in the ensemble.

The concert opened with Smetana's overture, "The Bartered Bride," in which, as in the symphony, some very fine playing was done, especially in the
